WIRELESS FAILS TO CONFIRM A VOLCANIC OUTBREAK

Inquiry by wireless telegraph through Richard H. Trent yesterday brought denials of the reported eruption of Mokuaweoweo. The inquiry was directed to both sides of Mauna Loa, and there was a negative reply in each instance.

Mr. Trent is of the opinion that there still may have been an explosion of some sort on Mauna Loa. "Mr. Austin is not given to fanciful reports," said he yesterday. "He was 10,000 feet up, and his view to Mauna Loa, 13,000 feet high, was unobstructed. It is very possible that he may have seen a display at Mokuaweoweo."

The following are the messages exchanged by wireless yesterday:

(By Wireless Telegraph Service).

Honolulu, Sept. 7, 1903.

L. S. Aungst, Honolulu, Hawaii:

Are there any indications of activity in Mokuaweoweo observable from your place. Please answer.

RICHARD H. TRENT.

Honolulu, Hawaii, Sept. 7, 1903.

Richard H. Trent, Honolulu:

Mr. Aungst is out. No activity at volcano observed.

MIDWAY ISLAND LOSES ITS BOX.

The following cablegram was received from Midway Island, yesterday: "The America Maru passed close last night going West. She signalled to us. She was going to throw a box overboard. We could see the box with our telescope but a heavy squall came up and prevented our getting outside the reef. This morning the box is gone."

LUAU AT KALIHI CAMP BRINGS OUT CANDIDATES

Jack Atkinson Boomed For the District Attorneyship and Robert Boyd Announced For County Surveyor--Hula In Evening.

The county campaign in the Seventh Precinct of the Fifth District was started yesterday afternoon at the Kalihi Detention Camp through the medium of a luau and the good cheer that accompanies the native feast. There was a solid delegation of voters at the table. Incidentally the boom of A. L. C. Atkinson, late secretary of the Republican Territorial Committee, was launched, as well as that of Robert Boyd for surveyor, and of Isaac Sherwood for auditor.

The campaign had an auspicious beginning if numbers count for anything, and the enthusiasm manifested was of the kind to augur well for the candidates proposed, although the Seventh's caucus will not take place until tomorrow evening, when the convention delegates will agree upon their choice of candidates. The luau was scheduled to begin at 3:30, but three-quarters of an hour were lost awaiting the arrival of Delegate Kalaniana'ole, who, however, failed to put in an appearance. Nearly all the delegates elected at the recent primary were present, their identity as such being manifested by a profusion of leis which decorated their persons.

Senator Achi occupied the chair of the toastmaster, and near him were A. L. C. Atkinson, Robert N. Boyd, Isaac Cockett, Ben Zabian, Jack Kalakela, David Kaahanui, Dan Kamakauahoa, Kaka, Isaac Sherwood and others prominent in the Seventh's politics. William Olepau, the Mark Hanna of the camp section, was given a rousing ovation on his appearance. During the course of the luau Senator Achi arose and toasted A. L. C. Atkinson, and in an enthusiastic speech, said that the voice of the people called the latter from his voluntary retirement from politics. The speaker stated that Mr. Atkinson was a man well fitted for the District Attorneyship. He was Hawaiian bred and counted his friends and adherents in both the Fourth and Fifth Districts by the hundreds. The announcement of Atkinson's candidacy for the office was the occasion for an outburst of cheering and subsequent hand-shakings. Robert Boyd supported the choice in a lengthy speech. Following this announcement came also that of Mr. Boyd for the office of County Surveyor and of Isaac Sherwood for that of County Auditor.

The entertainment continued last evening, the hula and the discussion of various forms of good cheer forming the principal sources of amusement.

A CHINESE KINETOSCOPE EXHIBITION IS BURNED UP

Native Boys Start a Fire In a Show Room and Endanger Human Life--The Culprits
Are Promptly Arrested.

Fire started by two natives caused the destruction of the thousand dollar kinetoscope belonging to Lam Kau, last evening, and might have caused the death of a dozen or more Chinese who were watching the moving picture machine grind out the interesting details of a Mexican bull fight.

Lam Kau is an enterprising Chinese who used to be content with running a little cigar store and lunch counter on King street just below Nuuanu, but a few months ago he began to see visions of a fortune. About that time a man came to town with a kinetoscope, which the Chinese went in to see on one occasion. Lam Kau was much interested and as the show man wasn't making a success, he readily consented to sell out. Lam Kau is said to have paid $1,000 for the machine.

He cleared out the rear room in his store and set up the machine. Also he introduced an expurgated pair of hula girls. Then he started his machine grinding out a bull fight, the Japan-China war, and a few other realistic scenes. Chinese and English jugglers and "The Great Sea Bath" were advertised among the attractions and crowds filled the little back room whenever the show was opened.

Last night the place was crowded with Chinese who had duly paid ten cents apiece for the privilege of standing room while the machine was in motion. About eight o'clock two native boys presented themselves at the door and demanded admittance. Lam Kau demanded a dime from each. The natives refused and the Chinese insisted. Then the natives used violence and attempted to force their way into the place of exhibition. They shoved past the door, and inside engaged Lam Kau in personal combat. In the melee the kinetoscope was overturned and the acetylene gas furnished the motive and illuminating power took fire. The fire was thought to have been extinguished and about this time, Officer Palepau appeared and placed the two natives under arrest. At the station they gave their names as D. P. Opuu and D. H. Kahanamoku, and a charge of assault was placed against them.

When the officer returned to Lam Kau's place he discovered that the fire had fallen among the tobacco in the front of the store room. The small room where the exhibition was being given was filled with the choking fumes of the acetylene gas, and inside were a dozen or more Chinese who were either too frightened or too interested to seek safety in flight. The officer was compelled to drag some of them out by force, and at the risk of suffocation from the fumes. The fire was still blazing inside, and an artilleryman from Camp McKinley, Corporal Liley, rushed in and scattered the flames, nearly suffocating while he did so. Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth also made an effort to save the machine, but he was also driven out by the fumes. The fire department arrived early on the scene, but used little water. Some of the tobacco was damaged and the kinetoscope was a total wreck. Lam Kau's stock in trade was also badly scattered.

The loss will probably exceed $1,000 as the moving picture machine is said to have been worth that amount. A charge of malicious mischief will now be placed against the two natives, and the simple assault threatens to become serious in view of the after consequences.

Eagles Enjoy Dance

The local eyrie of Eagles picked a delightful night for their dance at the Peninsula, Pearl Harbor. A big crowd went and returned on the special train and the pavilion was crowded with dancers. Others enjoyed the moonlight and the lawns surrounding the building.

This is the first outing given by the order but its success has caused it to be announced as the precursor of others to come later.
